Sharing a Few Helpful Hints for Deer Hunters

Sometimes experience can be both a blessing and a curse. While I pursued my BS in Wildlife Science at Penn State from 1981-85, my course work required me to spend considerable time at the Deer Research Center or "the Deer Pens" as they were known on campus. There, I had the opportunity to observe antler development over time, so I know first-hand the marvel of a monster 200-inch nontypical buck's maturation from initial growth at the pedicle in early Spring, through incredibly rapid development while in velvet, to final hardened antler by late August. Then, during my tenure as Battalion Commander of the 1-107th Field Artillery from 2004-2008, I typically spent two or three weekends a month training with our Firing Batteries over in Ohio at Ravenna Training & Logistics Site (RTLS) or "the Ravenna Arsenal" as it was previously known. There, with some 22,000 acres fenced in since 1940, white-tailed deer flourish. On a typical day in the field there, I would usually see between 300 to 400 deer, of which some 100 were antlered bucks, and out of those approximately 2-dozen were "wall-hangers" with at least 160-inches of antler and a few would top 200-inches. If you're not familiar with it, the Boone & Crockett scoring system is the accepted standard for measuring a buck's antlers (main beams and points) with categories for both typical (symmetrical) and nontypical (asymmetrical) racks.

Having been exposed to big bucks quite a bit in the past, I know how truly rare a 180-inch typical is in the wild. Last year, I devoted my entire 2018-19 hunting season to pursuing one particular buck during archery, rifle, and flintlock. This year, I told myself I wouldn't do that again. Then in October 2019, I came across a massive buck rub on an 8-inch diameter black cherry tree with bark shredded off from one-foot to four feet above the ground. (There isn't an elk within 60-miles of where I'm hunting.) Recently, I watched a massive buck trot across a natural gas line cut some 400-yards away that was twice the size of the does accompanying him while his belly was the height of their backs. I still have a few days of archery, then rifle and flintlock seasons to figure out what I'm going to do with this antler obsession I'm smitten with.

In my efforts to pursue this buck, allow me to share some hints my experiences have yielded: (1) If you walk in some distance to your stand, you're going to perspire. I keep a one-gallon Zip-lock bag in my pack and as soon as I reach my stand, I change shirts. Seal the sweaty one in the bag to help contain human odor. (2) Knowing the wind direction at all times is key. I tie 10-inch pieces of nylon thread to all my hunting implements (crossbow, compound bow, rifle, and flintlock) as wind indicators, so I always know the fickle wind direction. I also have pieces of thread hanging off all my tree stands. (3) Take along an extra old foam cushion, like the one you sit on, and put it under your feet when the temperature is colder than 40 degrees. Conduction with the ground, a rock, or your metal tree stand platform will make your feet cold and a layer of insulation will help slow or eliminate the heat loss process. (4) If you plan on moving a tree stand, remember to bring the key for your tree stand lock. (Learn from my folly.) (5) A roll of surveyors/flagging tape is helpful for marking a blood trail. The mature doe I harvested on Oct. 28 traveled through a maple grove where every leaf on-the-ground was bright yellow with red spots. The tape allowed me to keep track of where I found blood. (Remember to pick them all up afterward.) (6) Trust your nose. I have always been able to smell deer (they have a distinct odor) and I detected the scent of my downed doe from 30-yards away before finding her white belly lying there amongst the mountain laurel through my binoculars. (7) Finally, don't wait to zero or confirm the zero on your deer rifle. Firearms deer season opens Sat. after Thanksgiving this year (the day a lot of hunters used to use for sighting-in). You want your rifle to be right on target.

Good luck! I hope a trophy buck is in your future. God Bless, Be Safe, and Great Outdoors! ©WBB 2019

Paws Corner

DEAR PAW'S CORNER:
 Whenever our dog
 "Champ" starts barking,
 my husband barks back at him. I know he's doing it as a joke, but I think it's teaching our puppy bad habits. - Sara Y., via email
 DEAR SARA: Your
 husband's "barking"
 sends a mixed signal to Champ. When trying to conduct behavioral training with a dog you don't want to be unclear about commands. There's a better way to encourage Champ to stop barking.
 Keep a few treats in your pocket to start, along with a clicker trainer. When Champ starts barking,
 click the trainer once and say "Speak." Hold out a treat for him. When Champ takes the treat
 - meaning, stops barking for a moment - click the trainer twice as he takes the treat and say "Shush" (or Quiet, or whatever command you want to use).

Repeat this each time he starts barking. When you notice that he stops barking
 for longer periods
 after the treat-double click, phase out the treats
 but keep using the "one

Proper Disposal Electronics

A Guide to Doing it right in Lawrence and Mercer Counties

Consumer electronics are an important part of our lives at home and at work. The technology that powers our electronics changes constantly as the industry looks for ways to make our devices faster, smaller, energy efficient, etc. The result is that our society is discarding “outdated” devices at an increasing rate. According to a 2011 EPA report: 438 million new electronic products were sold, 5 million tons were in storage, 2.37 million tons were ready for end-of-life management, and about 25% were collected for recycling.

By weight, electronics make up approximately 2% of our waste stream, yet account for about 70% of the hazardous waste that we consumers throw away.

Wait... Hazardous!?

Electronics contain many different chemicals and elements that are required for them to work. This includes Lead, Mercury, Brominates, Beryllium, Cadmium, and Arsenic, to name but a few. The normal day-to-day usage of electronics doesn't expose us to these materials. Exposure to toxic substances becomes a concern upon their disposal, which is why recycling is important.

The good news is that electronics along with their toxic components can be recycled.

What are the laws concerning Electronics?

The Pennsylvania Covered Device Recycling Act, passed in 2010, prohibits the landfilling of televisions, desktop computers, laptops, monitors, and computer peripherals. Residents and businesses must recycle these items.

Why is it important to properly dispose of my Electronics?

Illegal exporting overseas is often associated with free or inexpensive programs. Units shipped in this manner are usually broken open, stripped of valuable components, and abandoned or burned. This exposes the workers, environment, and eventually us to the hazardous materials contained in them. There are also personal and security risks from data on computer hard drives sent overseas in this fashion.

Landfilling was the primary method of electronics disposal in the past. As already discussed, electronics contain a myriad of potentially toxic materials that can be recycled. Landfilled materials are crushed, exposing their contents. Increasingly, electronics are illegally dumped along roads and into waterways. In both these cases there is potential for the leaching of harmful chemicals into the environment. There is no such thing as “away” when it comes to throwing our “trash” away.

Many electronic components contain elements such as Hafnium, Neodymium, and Ruthenium, which are very rare. Mining associated with obtaining the ores for rare earth elements is energy intensive and damaging to the environment.

Recycling old electronic items is important for many reasons including: reduced environmental contamination associated with illegal dumping and landfilling, recovered materials (many of which are toxic and/or rare) for reuse which reduces the need for raw material mining, and greatly reduces greenhouse gases associated with landfilling, refining, and mining.

Why is there a cost to recycle electronics?

The recycling of electronics is complex. Electronics items are made with a variety of plastic, metal, and glass components that must be disassembled. This disassembly, called demanufacturing, is performed with manual labor which is time consuming and expensive.

Another challenge facing electronics recycling operations is the marketing of some materials. Televisions and computer monitors are the most commonly recycled electronics items. The glass from older Cathode Ray Tube televisions and computer monitors contains significant amounts of lead and is a recycling challenge. Recycling markets for the leaded glass are limited and expensive. The proper management of the leaded glass from these TVs and monitors is a primary reason for the costs associated with electronics recycling programs.

Materials from some free programs that are illegally sent overseas bypass marketing challenges with extremely cheap labor.

What should I look for in an electronics recycling program?

Look for programs that are registered with the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection (DEP). The DEP website includes useful information about electronics and a listing of state-wide programs. There are also Federal and National certifications to look for. This includes the R2 (Responsible Recycling) and e-Stewards certification programs.

Where can I recycle my electronics?

The Lawrence-Mercer Recycling/Solid Waste Department maintains the “Electronics Recycling Guide” which includes a listing of known local options. The guide is updated frequently and the most recent copy is available through our website or can be obtained by contacting us directly.

“This fact sheet is partially funded by a grant from the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection.”

Our Daily Bread

Hubble, Zoos, And Singing Children
Read: Psalm 148

Praise Him, all you stars of light! Psalm 148:3

What do the Hubble Space Telescope, a zoo, and singing children have in common? According to the teaching of Psalm 148, we could conclude that they all point to God's magnificent creation.

The idea that God created our world is often questioned, so perhaps it's a good time for a reminder of the praise we and all creation should heap on our heavenly Father for His magnificent handiwork.

Hubble can help us with that through its eye-popping pictures of our universe. Every one of those brilliant photos points to stars that focus attention on God's creative majesty. "Praise Him, all you stars of light!" says verse 3.

A visit to a zoo points us to the great diversity of wildlife God created. We look at verses 7 and 10 and say thank you to God for sea creatures, wild animals, insects, and birds.

And a few minutes of watching little children singing uninhibited praises to God symbolizes the truth that all people of earth should lift their voices in honor of our Creator (vv.11-13).

Stars, animals, and children: "Let them praise the name of the Lord, for His name alone is exalted" (v.13). Let's join in saying thanks for His creation. "Praise the Lord!" By Dave Branon

Praise to the Lord, the Almighty, the King of creation! O my soul, praise Him, for He is thy health and salvation! All ye who hear, now to His temple draw near; Join me in glad adoration! Neander Creation displays God's power.

• "I've been trying to make better choices about the packaging on items I purchase, and I've stopped using plastic wrap and baggies for the most part. But there are some items that wax paper or parchment bags can't handle. But I found a solution: beeswax wrap. It works just like cling wrap, and you can wash it easily. It's pretty cool and reusable over and over." -- K.G. in Florida

• There are a lot of sports to enjoy: football, basketball, baseball, hockey ... olive oil wrestling? In Turkey it's the national sport. Kirkpinar, as it's known there, has been popular since the Ottoman Empire. The town of Edirne has been hosting the annual tournament since 1361.

Strange But True

by Samantha Weaver

• It was multitalented Robert Anton Wilson who made the following observation: "It only takes 20 years for a liberal to become a conservative without changing a single idea."
• If you use Listerine to freshen your breath, you might be interested to know that its original formula is 26.9% alcohol by volume – that comes out to 54-proof gargle.
• Beloved British author Charles Dickens was forced to go to work at the age of 11, pasting labels on bottles of shoe polish in a boot-blackening factory. Soon after, his father was put in debtors' prison, and when his mother and siblings went to live with him there; young Charles was left to live on the streets and fend for himself. It's not surprising, then, that after Dickens achieved the great success he enjoyed as a writer, he was an ardent campaigner for children's rights.
• Thought for the Day: "Even a purely moral act that has no hope of any immediate and visible political effect can gradually and indirectly, over time, gain in political significance." – Vaclav Havel
