DEAR PAW'S CORNER: I recently adopted a big, shaggy mutt named "Dover." I'm pretty new to owning a dog, and I wonder if his thick fur coat will bother him here in the South. What can I do to make sure he's comfortable? - Gerry in Macon, Georgia

DEAR GERRY: First off, congratulations on your new family member! It sounds like you're already doting on Dover. Talk to Dover's veterinarian about how he should be groomed for summer. Some long-haired dogs do very well in the summer if they're regularly groomed, their fur is brushed out and trimmed a bit, and they don't spend a long time outdoors in the heat. Other dogs suffer in their long coats - they have trouble cooling off, and their skin can get very irritated. I've met more than a few that have their fur shaved very short during the warm months. A couple of other important notes for summertime dog care: Never leave a dog (or any pet) inside of a car, even for a few minutes, even with the window open a couple of inches. Car interiors can quickly become far too hot for pets and overwhelm their ability to cool off. (Remember, dogs don't sweat like we do to cool off.)

• The first real shampoo dates back to the 1500s. In India, "sapindus," aka soapberries or soapnuts, were boiled with dried Indian gooseberry and other herbs. The extract created a lather and resulted in soft, shiny hair. © 2020 King Features

Strange But True

by Lucie Winborne

- In 1834, American physician John Cooke Bennet added tomatoes to ketchup, which previously consisted of fish or mushrooms. As tomatoes contain a healthy dose of vitamins and antioxidants, Bennet then branded his sauce as a cure for diarrhea, indigestion, jaundice and rheumatism.
- Chickens can see and dream in full color. They also can taste saltiness, but not sweetness.

Alternate Route

Read: Proverbs 3:1-12

There is a way that seems right to a man, but its end is the way of death. —Proverbs 14:12

My daughter was coming home from college for the weekend to play the piano at her friend's wedding. Before she left, I sent her an e-mail directing her to take an alternate route instead of the one she usually travels for the 6-hour drive home. Why? Because on that road a few weeks earlier my wife and I had been delayed for 2 hours by construction crews.

As parents, we must provide alternate routes in life as well. We've observed the wrong highways others have traveled or perhaps the foolish ways we have taken, and we know they lead to delay or danger.

Think of all the possible paths our children might choose—the road of sexual immorality, the avenue of alcohol and drug abuse, the way of ungodly friends. But in Christ, there is an alternate path—a route that will lead our children away from the struggles we know they'll face on any other road.

The right route starts with the Via Dolorosa—the way of the cross. It starts with salvation. It continues with a path that is straight (Prov. 3:5-6) and is directed by God's Word (Ps. 119:105). It includes Jesus as a traveling companion (Jn. 8:12). That's the ultimate alternate route. Let's model it clearly so our children will see the right way.

The journey that we're on each day Has many roads to choose; But if we trust the Lord to guide,
Our way we cannot lose. —Sper

To guide your children on the right way, you must go that way yourself.

Grillin' Recipe Corner

Shoyu Chicken

1 cup soy sauce
1 cup brown sugar
1 cup water
4 cloves garlic, minced
1 onion, chopped
1 tablespoon grated fresh ginger root
1 tablespoon ground black pepper
1 tablespoon dried oregano
1 teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes
1 teaspoon ground cayenne pepper
1 teaspoon ground paprika
5 pounds skinless chicken thighs

Whisk together the soy sauce, brown sugar, water, garlic, onion, ginger, black pepper, oregano, red pepper flakes, cayenne pepper, and paprika in a large glass or ceramic bowl. Add the chicken thighs, and toss to evenly coat. Cover the bowl with plastic wrap, and marinate the chicken in the refrigerator for at least 1 hour. Preheat an outdoor grill for medium heat, and lightly oil the grate. Remove the chicken thighs from the marinade. Discard the remaining marinade. Grill the chicken thighs on the preheated grill until cooked through, about 15 minutes per side.

The Towed Toad and Other Anecdotes Concerning This Common Amphibian

I'm guessing you've probably seen them. They come in a tremendous variety. I'm talking about those clever bumper stickers that say, "I Brake for...". Some of the more common ones going around include "I Brake for Yard Sales"; "I Brake for Bigfoot"; and "I Brake for Moose". Well, I'm thinking about having a special one made, so I can put it on the back of my lawn tractor. Mine would read, "I Brake for Toads". Now, we've always had a very healthy population of the eastern American toad (Latin Name: Anaxyrus americanus) on our property; but this year, we have an abundance to the point that I'm constantly slowing down or even stopping the mower to allow a "hop toad" anywhere from 1-inch up to 3-inches to get out of the way. I'm not sure if this is attributable to the very mild Winter we experienced, the fact we had ideal breeding conditions with ample rainfall the past few years, a combination of both, or possibly something completely different. Whatever the reason, I know toads are all over the place on our property and I'm not complaining. I'm actually pretty happy to have them around.

The American Toad is the most common toad found in the United States and the eastern American toad is the most widely distributed of the three subspecies of American toads. They can be found east of the Mississippi River from the northern portions of the Gulf States in the U.S., all the way up into northern Ontario and Quebec in Canada. They flourish in all 67-counties of PA and come in a wide variety of colors, ranging from light to dark brown, and shades of tan, olive, yellow, red, and almost black. The mottled, normally darker patches on a toad's back are incorrectly called "warts", but they are actually skin glands that can secrete a toxic substance, which is highly irritating to the mucous membranes in the mouths of predators attempting to eat a toad. I saw the adverse reaction our golden retriever had 15-years ago when he attempted to put one in his mouth and I'm sure many a young coyote pup, bear cub, or fox kit has learned the same lesson the hard way when they foolishly tried eating one. Unfortunately, there is a common myth that handling toads with their "warts" will cause you to get warts on your hands. If that was true, my hands would have been covered in warts before I even started kindergarten because I loved catching toads; but fortunately, that wasn't and still isn't the case.

Toads are considered backyard gardeners' friends for good reason. They consume a wide variety of undesirable "bugs". In addition to eliminating many insects that feed on our vegetables and flowers, toads receive my highest respect and admiration because they aggressively feast upon mosquitos and ticks. In addition to insects, the toad's diet consists primarily of earthworms and caterpillars. Many individuals are not aware of how prevalent toads are because they are primarily nocturnal. During the day, they are content to remain hidden in plant litter, leaf duff, mulch, loose soil or gravel. Much like mowing the grass brings them out of their beds, I've frequently had two or more hopping around in our garden when I've been running the rototiller. I always try to keep an eye on the toads to avoid harming them. Last week, when I was rototilling to plant my first batch of sweet corn, I had one particular 2-inch toad who kept moving just barely out of the way on each pass. Now, my rear-tine rototiller has a safety plate that drags behind to serve the dual purpose of keeping your foot from going beneath the whirling tines, while also helping to level out the churned soil. Apparently, this toad got tired of getting out of the way and simply hopped up onto the safety plate as I made a pass. For the next three passes across the corn patch, I had a towed toad who was perfectly content to go for a ride. After five minutes, he must have gotten bored with his new mode of transportation and hopped off into the freshly tilled soil to continue his day. Toads are just one of the fascinating amphibians who make the outdoors so wonderful to explore and observe. God Bless, Be Safe, and Great Outdoors! ©WBB 2020

Now Here's A Tip by JoAnn Derson

• For seasonal items, if you didn't wear it last season, consider selling or donating. Same applies if it's a specialty item (skiwear, hiking boots, formalwear) that hasn't been used for more than two years. Many people keep items that are on the expensive side, even though season after season goes by without the item being used. If you rationalize keeping the scuba suit, plan a scuba trip!

• "I found a small waste basket that fits right between the wall and my dryer. There's a gap that's about 8 inches wide. The lip of the basket keeps it from sliding down to the floor, so it's easy to clean out the lint trap and put the waste in the basket. Also, I used a strip of hook-and-loop tape to attach a tissue holder box vertically to the wall. I stick a box of fabric softener sheets in it, and they, too, are right where I need them." - T.K. in Nevada

• "To keep the kitchen garbage can from smelling, I put spoiled food items in a bread bag, and then put it in the freezer until it's time for the garbage collector. I also have a friend with a compost bin, and I am doing the same with vegetables, fruit and peelings. I plan to bring the whole mess when I get to visit. The compost bin won't care if it's been defrosted!" - E.L. in VA

• To keep dirt from sticking to your dustpan, spray it lightly with furniture polish. Buff with a cloth so that it's not wet. Floor dirt will slide right off.

• Dusting shelves with knickknacks can be a real chore. Try slipping a knee-high stocking over the hose of your vacuum wand. You can get very close to items. If something did get sucked up, the stocking will catch it. This also works for toolboxes. - W.U. in SC ©King Features

Clever ways to use leftovers

The spread of CO-VID-19 has upended many people's lives. One way to socially distance oneself is to avoid unnecessary trips to places where the public may congregate, such as grocery stores.

Some people visit food stores every day, especially if they don't meal plan or shop for the week. According to the Time Use Institute, the average shopping trip takes 41 minutes and people go food shopping an average of 1.5 times per week. Any additional time spent at the grocery store increase the likelihood of contact with others, potentially increasing shoppers' risk of contracting coronavirus as well. Therefore, people taking steps to stay at home may have to rethink the way they purchase and use food.

Being more mindful of food waste and putting leftovers and ingredients to use in new ways can help stretch food further and reduce the need to make frequent trips to the grocery store. Consider these ideas to make use of leftovers.

- Save those vegetables. It's easy to scrape a half-portion of uneaten vegetables into the trash thinking it can't be used. Instead, combine it with other vegetables accumulated throughout the week. Many play well together and can be mixed into casseroles, omelets, soups, and stir-fry recipes.

- Create new meals. Using leftovers does not mean eating the same exact meal a second time. Ingredients can be utilized in new ways. For example, a roast chicken can be broken down and the meat can be used for fajitas on another night. Leftover tomato sauce and meatballs from a Sunday dinner can be turned into an impromptu chili with the addition of beans and peppers.
- Think beyond dinner. Leftovers can be collected at any time of day and used later on. Cold cuts can be chopped and used to make a stromboli with some refrigerated pizza dough. Save Belgian waffles from breakfast and top with breaded chicken fingers

• When I needed a new tire for my truck because I ran over a nail, the shop guy suggested I purchase a slightly used tire that was closer to the age and wear of the others. I spent less on the tire, and the tires will wear evenly. They're always looking out for me! - O.E. in Mississippi

• "I use curbside pickup for my groceries these days. I keep two large laundry baskets in the hatchback of my vehicle. Any bags go in the baskets, so it's easy to transport them into the house and keep contact to a minimum. When I'm done unloading and wiping down, I can spray out the laundry baskets and let them dry in the sun for next time. Can't be too careful." - T.E. in Virginia
