Our Daily Bread

Bees and Snakes

If you, then, though you are evil, know how to give good gifts to your children, how much more will your Father in heaven give good gifts to those who ask him! Matthew 7:11

Today's Scripture & Insight: Matthew 7: 7-11

Some problems have Daddy's name written all over them. For instance, my kids recently discovered bees had moved into a crack in our concrete front porch. So, armed with bug spray, I went out to do battle.

I got stung. Five times.

I don't like being stung by insects. But better me than my kids or wife. Taking care of my family's well-being is at the top of my job description after all. My children recognized a need, and they asked me to address it. They trusted me to protect them from something they feared.

In Matthew 7, Jesus teaches that we too should bring our needs to God (v. 7), trusting Him with our requests. To illustrate, Jesus gives a case study in character: "Which of you, if your son asks for bread, will give him a stone? Or if he asks for a fish, will give him a snake?" (vv. 9-10). For loving parents, the answer is obvious. But Jesus answers anyway, challenging us not to lose faith in our Father's generous goodness: "If you, then, though you are evil, know how to give good gifts to your children, how much more will your Father in heaven give good gifts to those who ask him!" (v. 11).

I can't imagine loving my kids more. But Jesus assures us that even the best earthly father's love is eclipsed by God's love for us. By: Adam R. Holz Reflect & Pray: Father, thank You for loving us so much more than even the best father here ever could. Help us to do as Jesus said with everything that's on our hearts; to ask, seek, and knock in our relationship with You.

Outdoor Opportunities By COL (Ret.) Grey D. Berrier II

The Motivation Behind Heading Outdoors as Frequently as Possible

Some things, you just have to see for yourself. I'm not talking about sporting events, music concerts, or theatrical performances. I'm referring to things in nature most people have only ever seen on a TV documentary or in a YouTube video. With the above average October temperatures finally ending, I hunted on Mon., Oct. 18 from a well-concealed ladder stand placed 20-yards from a habitual scrape location. At 6:30 PM, a nice 6-point came from the west and worked the scrape by repeatedly pawing the ground and rubbing his orbital gland on the overhanging licking branch. Not meeting our "Three Up" antler restrictions here in WMU 1A, I silently watched his instinctive behavior for 5-minutes. Suddenly, he jerked his head up, listened to something approaching from the east, and quickly exited back to the west. I immediately thought this might be a larger buck approaching. It turned out to be another slightly larger 6-point and he worked the scrape even more aggressively than his predecessor. While a shot never materialized on Mon. evening, I never tire of observing white-tailed deer behavior, up close and personal.

Tuesday morning, I'll get up at 4 AM, be on the road by 5 AM, arrive up in Veneango County before 6 AM, and then walk in over a mile in the darkness to be positioned before first shooting light at 7:10 AM. This is our PA early muzzleloader season for antlerless deer and bear, and there is a good possibility of seeing one or both species. Getting up extremely early, walking considerable distances, and sitting motionless are things I don't even think twice about, since I'm passionate about being outdoors as much as possible and I love doing those things. Every once in a while, I wonder what someone who is not outdoor-oriented thinks about hunters, hikers, and other outdoor-enthusiasts and their unique motivations fueling them to do what they do. Please allow me to provide some insight into what makes me "tick" and I'm sure there are other outdoorsmen and women who will agree with some or all of my rationales.

Why? That simple three letter word is behind a significant portion of human thought, conversation, and activity. Every parent can relate to children asking "Why" multiple times each day regarding just about everything they encounter. Most academic achievement and scientific progress boils down to seeking an answer to the "Why" behind things. I've always been inquisitive and "Why" seems to be the question that most frequently comes to my mind when I read, see, hear, touch, taste, or experience something. I've come to realize the reasons I love to spend as much time as possible outdoors fall into six broad categories. To convey my thoughts, I've labelled them, "My Six C's of Why I Love to Be Outdoors."

Here they are for you to ponder and consider if any apply to you: (1) Curiosity – I always want to know what's out there and what's just around the next bend or over the next rise. The topography, scenery, waterways, trees, plants, fungi, rocks, mammals, birds, reptiles, amphibians, and insects all interest me and since things are perpetually changing with the seasons, weather conditions, and time of day; I want to be out there as much as possible to see what's new and interesting. (2) Connection – I continually feel a close connection with nature and it is my goal to be minimally obtrusive and maximally present in the moment. It's my desire to see, hear, and experience things in nature most people miss. (3) Conditioning – I value time outdoors for what it is: exercise. Getting my heart rate elevated, blood pumping, and muscles working as the miles, elevation changes, and intermittent obstacles (rocks, roots, logs, etc.) pass by are worth the time, effort, and sweat exerted based on the long-term health benefits of walking outdoors.

(4) Contemplation – I do some of my best thinking when I'm outdoors. Whether I'm contemplating personal, family, societal, or professional matters, or simply writing my next outdoor column in my mind, I find clarity in getting outdoors away from the confinement of four walls or a vehicle's interior.

(5) Caring – I treasure wild places, both public lands and private property, where I have the privilege to explore. I realize it was someone's efforts before me that made those lands accessible to me and my efforts will help ensure the same opportunity is available for future generations. (6) Celebration – I make it a point to give credit where credit is due, each time I head outdoors. Everything I'm seeing and experiencing is part of God's creation and a testament to His omnipotence and omnipresence. I find my time afield becomes an act of worship since I feel very close to and connected with my Creator, Sustainer, and Lord. Why do you hunt, hike, or do whatever you love to do outdoors? Only you truly know the answer. As my youngest likes to say, "You do you!" God Bless, Be Safe, and Great Outdoors!

• Recipe Corner •

15 apples
2 cups white sugar
1 cup light corn syrup
1½ cups water
8 drops red food coloring

• Lightly grease cookie sheets. Insert craft sticks into whole, stemmed apples. In medium saucepan over medium-high heat, combine sugar, corn syrup and water. Heat to 300°-310°, or until a small amount of syrup dropped into cold water forms hard, brittle threads. Remove from heat and stir in food coloring. Holding apple by its stick, dip in syrup, remove and turn to coat evenly. Place on prepared sheets to harden.

Now Here's A Tip by JoAnn Derson

• The National Sleep Foundation says that exercise can contribute to better sleep. Work out at least 4-5 hours before you expect to hit the hay, though, because exercise can keep the heart rate elevated and give you energy for hours after you are done. Afternoon workouts are the best, but morning sessions are great, too. ©2021 King Features
