Outdoor Opportunities

By COL (Ret.) Grey D. Berrier II

Heading Cross-Country to Get Out on Our Cross-Country Skis

If you are a downhill skier, it's pretty much a given that pursuing your passion means traveling to a ski resort and purchasing a lift ticket. However, if you are a cross-country skier, you can pursue your cold-weather outdoor pursuit at many more local locations for free, like PA state parks, PA state forests, PA state game lands, county/municipal parks, rails-to-trails projects, and even some golf courses. But, cross-country skiing in those locations in Pennsylvania comes with one very big "IF," and that is "if" Mother Nature provides adequate snow. From my experience, to safely cross-country ski, you need a minimum of 7 to 8-inches of snow or else you risk damaging your bases (the part of each ski that touches the snow) on underlying sticks and rocks. Unfortunately, our previous two winters in 2022-23 and 2023-24 did not bring enough snow at any one time to warrant running the snow blower to clear our driveway or to get out on our cross-country skis, here in Lawrence County. I have to go back in my Runkeeper App (which tracks cross-country skiing) and in my smart phone photos to Jan. 2022 to find my last local excursion.

Well, during our warmer weather hikes and kayaking trips together, our son and I decided this winter of 2024-25 was going to be different and we were going to "chase snow," in order to get out on our cross-country skis. You might recall in my Dec. 13, 2024 piece, when I shared about seeing only my third PA fisher while deer-hunting in Crawford County on Dec. 7, I mentioned that the lake-effect snow up there was 16-inches deep. Finding sufficient snow only a little over an hour away from home, I eagerly contacted Grey III that evening and after attending the 8 AM church service on Sunday morning, we came home, waxed our waxless cross-country skis, loaded up my vehicle, and headed north towards snow.

You may not know this, but here in PA, where snow conditions and temperatures can vary significantly from day-to-day and even hour-by-hour, most cross-country skiers use waxless skis (which is somewhat of a misnomer). They are called waxless skis because they do not use an adhesive Kick wax under the central portion of the ski to provide grip on the snow when you are pushing off with your "weighted" ski. Rather, waxless skis have a "fish-scale" like pattern under the central portion, which grips the snow when pushing off. So, you wax the entire bases of your waxless cross-country skis with a Glide wax, which keeps snow (regardless, whether it is dry & icy or wet & sticky) from attaching to your skis' bases.

Believe it or not, if you can walk with a pair of trekking poles (where your arm goes forward at the same time as your opposite leg) and you can shuffle your feet, I can probably teach you how to cross-country ski in 15-minutes. (During my tour at Fort Wainwright, Alaska, 1985-89, we were the U.S. Army's "Arctic Warriors," so we were out on our cross-country skis from October through April, and I had the privilege of being a ski instructor for our Battalion.) Cross-country skis are not flat, but rather bowed, so the tips (front 1/3) and tails (back 1/3) touch the ground, while the middle 1/3 with the "fish-scales" is slightly off the ground. When cross-country skiing, the rear leg you are pushing off with flattens out the attached ski and gets grip with its "fish-scales," while the opposite forward leg glides on its tips and tails with its unweighted middle 1/3 slightly off the ground. The movement of your arms and the weighting & unweighting of your skis are a natural flow, which come quickly to most people. Ascending hills, traveling downhill, and making turns take a little time to learn, but it's not that difficult to master.

Since we rescued our German shepherd in March 2022, he had never been out cross-country skiing with us. He quickly learned on Dec. 8, it was much easier to fall behind me on the track I made in the snow, than it was to plow through the 16-inches on his own. Grey III, Saint, and I skied 7.5-miles on Dec. 8 in Crawford County. We saw how far in hunters had been willing to walk into the woods and we saw where the deer, coyotes, squirrels, porcupines, and other animals had meandered through their snow-covered habitat. Skiing out-and-back on some trails, we saw how deer and coyotes quickly found our packed-down ski trails and used them for easier walking. Having "broke trail" the entire time, I can tell you it is a lot easier skiing once a trail is set (effort-wise and speed-wise), than traversing fresh snow.

Watching the weather, we knew temperatures and snow conditions were right for a second trip up to Crawford County this past Sunday, Jan. 12. The highlight was a bald eagle flying overhead at tree-top level to check us out as we shushed along. We'll be heading back up for more cross-country skiing this winter as conditions permit. Why not give it a try sometime? God Bless, Be Safe, and Great Outdoors!

Our Daily Bread

God will bring every deed into judgment, including every hidden thing, whether it is good or evil. Ecclesiastes 12:14

A thief broke into a phone repair shop, smashed the glass of a display case, and began pocketing phones and more. He tried to conceal his identity from the surveillance camera by covering his head with a cardboard box. But during the burglary, the box briefly tipped, uncovering his face. Minutes later, the store owner saw the video footage of the robbery, called the police, and they arrested us that every hidden sin will be uncovered one day.

It's human nature to try to hide our sins. But in Ecclesiastes, we read that we should keep God's commandments, for every hidden thing will be brought before His righteous gaze and just verdict (12:14). The author wrote, "Fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the duty of all mankind" (v. 13). Even the hidden things which the Ten Commandments rebuked (Leviticus 4:13) won't escape His evaluation. He'll bring every deed into judgment, whether good or evil. But, because of His grace, we can find forgiveness for our sins in Jesus and His sacrifice on our behalf (Ephesians 2:4-5).

When we're conscious of and internalize His commandments, it can lead to a reverent fear of Him and a lifestyle to match. Let's bring our sins to Him and experience anew His loving, forgiving heart. By Marvin Williams
