• You can get five or six more uses out of a pump-top lotion bottle if you cut off the top to access the lotion inside that doesn't come out of the pump once the level is too low. You'd be surprised how much is still in there!

• F.J. of Texas writes: "Keep a fresh roll of unscented toilet tissue in the kitchen to clean up on the stove and countertop. It cleans up good because of its absorbency, and it saves money on expensive paper towels."

Outdoor Opportunities

By COL (Ret.) Grey D. Berrier II

Helpful Harsh Temperatures Hasten Hardy
Happy Anglers to Hallowed Hardwater

Do you have any idea how special Jan. 2025 has been to some outdoorsmen and women? Allow me to give you some appreciation of their delight. Think of something you really enjoy. It might be watching TV, reading, going to the gym, et cetera. Now imagine you could only do this beloved activity if weather conditions are right and that may only occur every so many years. I have just described how our local ice fisherman and woman feel about Jan. 2025 when our temps have remained below freezing almost all the time and we've had several nights below 0-degrees F to give them solid ice, which is safe to head out on.

Now, the solid form of H₂O, commonly known as ice, or "hardwater" as some have affectionately called it, is actually an anomaly in science. With the vast majority of elements/compounds, when they transition from liquid to solid, the solid becomes denser and settles to the bottom of a container holding it. However, "ice is less dense than water because when water freezes, its molecules arrange themselves in a crystalline lattice structure with more space between them compared to liquid water, due to the orientation of hydrogen bonds, which results in a larger volume for the same mass, making ice less dense and allowing it to float on water." (Source: Google AI Overview.) It is this phenomenon that has occurred on Lake Arthur, Lake Wilhelm, Pymatuning Reservoir, other local ponds and lakes, and even on a massive scale on Lake Erie, drawing ice anglers like moths to a flame. If you've driven by Lake Arthur on US-422 or Lake Wilhelm on I-79 recently, you've probably seen the hardy souls out there on the ice for yourself.

You may have wondered, how exactly do you ice fish? What gear is required? How do you dress? How do you find the fish? What tactics and techniques are successful? Well, I'll try to give you an overview, so you have some idea what those folks are doing when they brave the bitter cold and blowing winds for hours on end. First, they need solid ice. Four-inches is the generally accepted rule for safe foot travel. Ice thickness can vary significantly across a body of water. Some anglers will risk going out on less than 4-inches of ice; but in the big picture, no fish is worth risking falling through, suffering hypothermia, and possibly not making it. Second, you need a current PA fishing license. Remember PA fishing licenses are sold on a calendar year basis. When it comes to dressing properly to ice fish, layering is key from your head down to your feet, and keep in mind you need many more layers when sitting still out on the ice. Some individuals wear a vest life preserver as a just-in-case layer and many choose to wear ice fishing safety picks, which are attached by a chord and dangle from both sleeves for immediate accessibility to self-extract, if you fall through. Other good to have safety gear, especially for groups, are a throwable PFD, a throwable rope, and a ladder to facilitate a rescue by disturbing one's weight across thin ice.

Finding fish can be a challenge. Some use trial and error. Others start where they've caught fish in the past. Today, many use high-tech fish-finders, which can identify fish through the ice. And then there are those who simply start out in the vicinity of where others have already cut their holes, since those folks must know what's going on down in the water. Each person ice fishing can use up to five fishing devices, which can be rods, tip-ups, hand-lines, or any combination of the three, which must be within the immediate control of the person using them. Holes can be drilled in the ice with a manual, electric, or gas-powered ice auger, cut with a spud bar or hatchet (it's wise to attach a lanyard around your wrist because many a tool has permanently gone to the bottom of a lake), and I've even seen individuals using their favorite cordless drill with an ice auger drill bit. By regulation, holes in the ice cannot exceed 10-inches in any direction. Once your holes are drilled, you'll need a strainer/skimmer to remove ice chips and slush that forms. Favorite live baits include minnows, mealworms, and waxworms. While preferred artificial lures include: jigs, spoons, and jigging minnow lures in wide variety of colors with equally colorful names. Many ice anglers tip their lures with live bait and thoroughly believe a certain jigging pattern or motion is the key to success. Panfish like crappies, perch, and bluegills are the most frequent targets, but it's not uncommon to see walleye, bass, a muskie, or even trout on some waters, brought through the ice.

In the winter, fish slow down considerably, but they still must feed. Some ice fishermen and women go with very basic gear, while others invest in high-tech fish finders, underwater cameras, sleds, shanties, and heaters. Regardless of how they are pursued, many feel fish brought through the ice taste best. Our local ice anglers are hoping for safe ice for weeks to come!

God Bless, Be Safe, & Great Outdoors!

Our Daily Bread
Renewing Our Strength

They will soar on wings like eagles; they will run and not grow weary. Isaiah 40:31 READ Isaiah 40:27-31

A pair of eagles built a giant nest in a tree a few miles away from my house. Before long, the enormous birds had eaglets. They cared for their hatchlings together until one of the adult eagles was tragically struck and killed by a car. For several days, the surviving eagle flew up and down a nearby river, as if searching for the lost mate. Finally, the eagle returned to the nest and assumed the full responsibility of raising the offspring.

In any situation, single parenting can be challenging. The delight a child brings combined with possible financial and emotional pressure can create a broad range of experiences. But there's hope for those who have this important role, and for anyone trying to manage a situation that feels overwhelming.

God is with us when we feel exhausted and discouraged. Because He's omnipotent—all powerful—and doesn't change, His strength won't ever expire. We can trust what the Bible says: "Those who hope in [Him] will renew their strength" (Isaiah 40:31). Coming up against our own limits won't determine what happens to us because we can depend on God to supernaturally recharge us. Hoping in Him allows us to walk and not faint, and to "soar on wings like eagles" (v. 31). By Jennifer Benson Schuldt

What feels overwhelming in your life? How might God be encouraging you to rely on His strength?
