Worth the Wait

Abraham was a hundred years old when his son Isaac was born to him.

Genesis 21:5
READ Genesis 12:1-5

Talk about a layover. Phil Stringer waited eighteen hours to board a flight that was delayed due to thunderstorms. His patience and perseverance paid off, however. Not only did he get to fly to his destination and make it on time for important business meetings, but he was also the only traveler on the flight! All the other passengers gave up or made other arrangements. Flight attendants gave him whatever food items he desired, and Stringer adds, "I did sit in the front row, of course. Why not when you have the whole plane to yourself?" The outcome was definitely worth the wait.

Abraham also endured what must have felt like a lengthy delay. Way back when he was known as Abram, God told him that He would make him "into a great nation" and that "all peoples on earth [would] be blessed through" him (Genesis 12:2-3). Only one problem for the seventy-five-year-old man (v. 4): how could he become a great nation without an heir? His waiting was left wanting at times, however. He and wife Sarai tried to "help" God fulfill His promise with some misguided ideas (see 15:2-3; 16:1-2). And when he "was a hundred years old . . . Isaac was born to him" (21:5). His faith was later celebrated by the writer of Hebrews (11:8-12). Waiting can be hard. And, like Abraham, we might not do it perfectly. But as we pray and rest in God's plans, may He help us persevere. In Him, it's always worth the wait. By Tom Felten

REFLECT and PRAY

What are you waiting for? How can you rest and persevere in God's strength?

Dear God, please help me wait and persevere in You.

Kovels

Antiques and Collecting
 by Terry and Kim Kovel

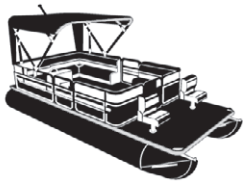

Q: I would like to know the value of my old wooden duck toy. There is a mama duck with three ducklings on a string. Mama has a yellow-orange beak and a hat, and the babies have yellow beaks. All their heads turn.

A: You have a Quacky Family toy, which was made by Fisher-Price from about 1940 to 1958. Production was stopped during World War II. From 1940 to 1942, the ducks had rubber bills and were held together with rubber connectors that allowed children to change the order of the ducklings. From 1946 to 1948, the ducks had felt bills and were connected with wooden dowels. In 1948, a version with metal connectors was introduced. Starting in 1949, the ducks had plastic bills. The original retail price for the Quacky Family in 1940 was 50 cents. Today, they sell for about $25 to $50.

• TIP: Put ceramic saucers or glass or plastic plant holders under vases of flowers or potted plants. There are inexpensive throwaway plastic dishes that have a rim and are exactly the right size and shape for a plant.

DEAR PAW'S CORNER:

I want to take my 2-year-old dog, "Halley," on hikes this summer, but I'm terrified that she will get Lyme disease. What will happen to her? - Jim T., Hyde Park, New York

DEAR JIM: I commend you for being concerned about the risk of contracting Lyme disease. However, I don't want you to change your hiking plans with Halley. As with any jaunt outside, preparation and awareness are the key to keeping your dog healthy.

Lyme disease is transmitted through tick bites, with the deer tick as the biggest culprit. The tick latches onto the skin and can transmit the bacteria that cause Lyme in 12 to 24 hours.

A Lyme-infected dog may show symptoms immediately, or months after the bite. Lameness that goes away and returns is a key symptom that Lyme is affecting their joints. Dogs may also run a high fever, be lethargic, lose weight due to appetite loss or vomit, especially if Lyme is affecting their kidneys.

Prevention is important. Here is what to do:
- Treat your dog with a topical or chewable flea and tick preventative on schedule.

- Keep your dog on a sturdy leash at all times when hiking.

- Avoid walking through tall grasses or past low-drooping trees. If that's unavoidable, run your hand along your dog's coat as soon as you're clear of the area to brush away any crawling ticks. (Yes, it's icky. Just do it.)

- After the hike, thoroughly check your dog's coat and skin for ticks. Remove any latched-on ticks with a tick removal tool and monitor for symptoms.

- If your dog begins showing symptoms, get testing and treatment immediately.

Lyme is treatable with antibiotics. An annual vaccine is also available through your veterinarian. And a vaccine for humans is currently in development. So don't change your plans - just be prepared.

Outdoor Opportunities

By COL (Ret.) Grey D. Berrier II

Some Surprising Observations and Fantastic Finds from Around the Yard

Sometimes you make a change that has unintended results. We had a massive black cherry tree growing in our backyard. It was approximately 75-feet tall, over three feet in diameter, but only 25-feet from the house. The good news was the black cherry was on the southside, providing tremendous shade in the Summer. The bad news was some of the top branches were starting to die and we always lived with the threat an exceptionally strong wind gust from the south could cause the vast tree to strike our house.

This past Fall, we made the decision to have solar panels installed on our home's roof. Part of that process meant the huge black cherry tree had to come down, since its shade would obstruct the sun. It was a two-day job that required a bucket truck, guys with climbing gear, a substantial chipper, and a skid steer. Any branches under 5-inches went through the chipper, but anything larger, including the enormous bole sections just above the stump, were placed in an extensive pile behind our pavilion near the firepit, by the skid steer operator. I never thought about it beforehand, but the famous quote from the 1989 movie "Field of Dreams" was very apropos, "If you build it, they will come." Turns out, what I thought was a simple log pile, is actually a big playground for the abundant squirrel population on our property. Within a few days after its creation in December and continuing now on almost a daily basis, we get to watch the squirrels playing on the log pile. Sometimes, it's just one enthusiastically jumping from log to log, as if they just want to get some exercise. Other times, it's two or even three squirrels playing their version of "King of the Hill" as they fight for dominance on whatever big log they decide is worth scuffling over.

Typically, it's the much larger fox squirrels, with their gray backs and orangish-red undersides, that dominate the playground. However, two or three times a week, the smaller gray squirrels get their turn to romp around the log pile. I wondered if it would ever happen and this past Saturday, I guess the allure of frolicking got to be too much. For the first and so far, only time, one of the smaller red squirrels that now inhabit our woods made the 50-yard dash from the woods' protective cover to the log pile for playtime. Red squirrels remind me of the cartoon character, "Speedy Gonzales," and this particular one did not disappoint as it zipped around from log to log for almost five-minutes with very few pauses. I know my wife and I enjoy looking out the window to watch the squirrels, but it's our dog who can spend hours observing the comical show, and who's occasional bark tells us the squirrels are overly energetic at that moment and he'd like to join the chase. In addition to squirrels, we've watched several male robins, sometimes as many as four, do battle over the log pile; with their wings thrashing, legs kicking, and beaks pecking; their combined aerial combat and ground skirmishes appear fierce and unforgiving. Other winged species that have frequently visited the log pile include: northern flickers (mostly looking down for their favorite quarries, ants and worms), mourning doves, grackles, house sparrows, and starlings.

I was behind the power curve, when it came to mowing our grass for the first time. While I'm on the mower, I'm always carefully looking down for sticks, roots, and rocks that could damage the mower's blades. This close observation paid big dividends this past Sunday afternoon. Nestled by our hostas, out front amongst the trees, was the first morel mushroom of 2026! My wife and visiting daughter were walking around picking up sticks, so I called them over to show them my precious find. When I saw a second one, I stopped the mower and the hunt was on! Mary went inside to get a paring knife and colander. Morel mushrooms frequently pop up where the roots of dead elms run underground. Over the next 15-minutes, Mary, Shannon, and I found two dozen morels growing amongst the trees in front of our house. Morels do not look like a traditional mushroom or toadstool. They have a mushroom stem with what almost appears like a gnarled soft ice cream cone top. The ones we found had off-white stems and light brown tops, and like all true morels (the ones safe to eat) were completely hollow when you cut them off at the stems. We filled the colander and our impressive haul came out to 1.18 lbs. on our kitchen scale. To prepare them, we carefully wash ours off, slice them like calamari, and sauté them in olive oil. They were absolutely delicious for dinner! (Last year, a quick check online revealed fresh morels were selling for $85.00 a half-pound.) So, you can understand my delight in finding over a pound in our front yard! All this to say, morel season is upon us and you too can head outdoors to find some. Our yard is interesting and yours probably is too, if you look closely!

SENIOR NEWS LINE

by Matilda Charles

Avoiding cognitive decline

Scroll around the internet to look for ideas about avoiding cognitive decline, and you'll find a wide variety of suggestions and studies. One thing many of them agree on, however, is the value of playing games.

UCLA has it narrowed down to four types in particular. Brain training games came in at the top of their list after they did a review of studies about improving cognitive function. Brain games were found to help with our ability to plan and focus, to remember information we hear, to recall information and to help with information processing speed. Crossword puzzles, next on the list, have value even if we only do them once a month. But more often has a greater impact.

Number puzzles, it is said, can have a powerful impact on memory, reasoning and attention. Again, the more often you do them, the greater the result.

Last on their list is three-dimensional video games (such as Super Mario). Memory improved after only playing for two weeks.

But the various universities and research groups don't all agree.

Columbia University concluded that crossword puzzles were better than computer video games for memory function. One study that went on for years determined that training for brain processing speed still had benefits decades later.

To be considered: Even if you don't have any signs of cognitive decline, starting early to keep ahead of it is no doubt valuable. And since the studies don't agree about which method is best, perhaps we should sample among all of them. A crossword puzzle per day, some time spent on computerized games, working on cognitive brain games for a few hours each week, joining others to work on a jigsaw puzzle, playing chess or mahjong or even solitaire ... surely it all adds up, right? It's never too late to start.

• Two ways to save money on laundry expenses: First, spring and summer are an excellent time to get into line drying clothes – especially towels and jeans, which take longer to dry thoroughly in a dryer. Then, clean out and shorten your dryer's vent hose to make machine drying more energy efficient. It cuts down drying time, too, saving you time AND money.

• "I have pets that leave hair and dirt on the couch. When I wash my cushion covers, one thing I always do is put them back on the pillows when they are not quite dry. They stretch better when they are a little bit damp. I had a terrible time a few years ago, when I let them dry all the way and couldn't get them back on!" – H.P. in Arizona
